UAMS Health Opens Neighborhood Clinic at Financial Centre Parkway Offering Primary Care for All Ages

LITTLE ROCK — UAMS Health Neighborhood Clinic opened an additional location today, offering primary care for people of all ages from University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences (UAMS) providers.

The clinic is at 11300 Financial Centre Parkway in West Little Rock in the space formerly occupied by a UAMS obstetrics and gynecology clinic, which has moved to the UAMS Health Women's Center at 6119 Midtown Ave.

Primary care physicians and health care providers serve as a first point of contact for a wide variety of medical needs, from management of chronic conditions like diabetes and heart disease to treatment of common concerns like respiratory and gastrointestinal illness.

UAMS primary care providers create a medical home for patients of all ages, where all health needs can be addressed. As an extra advantage, if the primary care provider determines the patient needs to see a specialist, the patient will already be in the UAMS network of providers. UAMS is home to the widest variety of health specialists in the state, ranging from experts in orthopaedic interventions to innovators in cancer treatment.

This unique relationship of primary care physicians with a large community of specialists provides the very best of care.

UAMS providers at the Financial Centre Parkway location include internal medicine specialists:

- Morgan Moore, M.D. – Residency in internal medicine and pediatrics and medical degree from UAMS.
- Caleb Guthrey, M.D. – Residency in internal medicine and pediatrics and medical degree from UAMS.
- Matthew Crouch, M.D. – Residency in internal medicine and pediatrics at Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, Illinois; and medical degree from UAMS.

The Financial Centre Parkway Neighborhood Clinic joins UAMS' network of neighborhood clinics in Central Arkansas, making the expertise of the state's only health sciences university more easily accessible in the community. Additional UAMS Health Neighborhood Clinic locations:
